World's Largest Blind Taste Test

Brief

When Kraft announced they'd be removing artificial ingredients from their mac & cheese, people were worried the taste would change. Kraft asked how we could convince people that the new recipe tasted the same. Our answer? Don't tell people they're eating it.

Execution

Last December, Kraft started selling the new recipe in original boxes, and over the next three months Americans devoured it without noticing a thing. That's when we announced what we'd done.

Results

Over 1 billion earned media impressions.
50 million boxes of mac & cheese sold during the taste test.
Millions of boxes sold since.
